

Fight climate change

Thank you for Mike Rivage-Seul's article arguing grassroots groups should ignore the election results and double down on efforts to demonstrate to Congress we won't wait longer for legislation.

He's right, and this is Citizens' Climate Lobby's attitude. We'll work with anyone in Congress to address climate change.

This year CCL will double our membership, double its meetings with senators and representatives, double published letters to editors, double fund-raising and finish establishing a chapter in every congressional district.

That's how you get legislation out of committee and onto the president's desk — with a chapter of earnest, educated, energetic constituents in every district.

If we concentrate our energies and people-power, we'll see legislation passed. CCL doesn't deal with every environmental issue, nor worry about the Keystone XL pipeline, fracking or coal exports.

We only seek a carbon-emissions fee to be paid by fossil-fuel producers on their products with all revenue rebated to the public. If a gradually rising emissions fee is enacted, all fossil fuel side issues will resolve themselves, and our nation will proudly watch emissions drop rapidly.

I urge readers to join CCL's Kentucky chapters.
