Evidence clear on climate change

You published a very sad article by Lee Nason (Nov. 30, "Global warming solutions not so easy") in which she regurgitates nonsense about inadequate evidence for climate change that was written by people paid to create climate change confusion, and their misinformation floats around on the internet. She also quoted silly stuff about no global temperature increases in 15 years which is patently untrue and is just another myth floating around on the internet to confuse the public.

Graphs that demonstrate no temperature rise are prepared in a distorted fashion to make it look as if warming stopped, but anyone who reads the numbers closely realizes it is a sleight of hand trick. As they say, figures don't lie, but liars can figure.

Nason repeatedly refers to climate change scientists and environmentalists as "alarmists." Anyone who uses that type of language is not engaged in civil discourse based on facts but is trying to smear people who have all the facts on their side and are trying to move this country to enacting effective climate change legislation.

Please don't let people paid by fossil fuel associations prevent legislation intended to stabilize the climate. Please endorse a revenue-neutral carbon tax as the most effective, efficient, equitable solution to climate change.
