

Theory about climate change flawed

Judy Weiss 7:38 p.m. CST January 13, 2015

George Will's op-ed column "Climate change has instructive past" (Jan. 7) was meant to be serious, but it turned out to be quite funny.

Will would rather draw inferences about modern day climate change from two historians who specialize in the ninth through 14th centuries instead of relying on current reports by physicists using high tech satellite measurements of ice sheets and 3,000 floats in the ocean measuring ocean temperatures. Hysterical! Those two poor embarrassed historians didn't prove modern day climate change isn't caused by fossil fuel use just because climate change happened before.

Think about how seriously flawed that reasoning is! I always get headaches when I'm overtired. One day my husband complained to me that he had a headache. I said you must be overtired. He said, "but I never get headaches." Right. We went to the doctor and found out he was having TIAs (transient ischemic attacks) and needed blood thinners to prevent a stroke.

As for the climate's current fever, take one carbon tax, increase the dose every year until fossil fuels are out of our economic system. Rebate all tax collected to the public ... the rebate is sweet and a spoonful of sugar helps the medicine go down in the most delightful way. Please contact Citizens' Climate Lobby for more information.

Judy Weiss lives in Brookline
LINK